Psychiatrist + Pop Artist

ABOUT ZIGGY

Ziggy Yoediono is a psychiatrist and pop artist based in Fayetteville, North Carolina. He creates all of his paintings on canvas using POSCA paint markers. His paintings are bold and unapologetically colorful, with recurring imagery that includes exploding heads and sunglasses.

Through Doctor Ziggy Studio, he is developing a broader creative practice centered on original painting, accessible art, and visual publishing. His 2026 visual zine, Art Doesn't Need Permission, explores personal taste, living with art, and the idea that art does not always need to match, carry deep meaning, or cost a fortune to matter.

ARTIST STATEMENT

I paint something because I like the idea.

I'm drawn to bright colors—particularly pink and yellow—and images that catch my attention: sunglasses, exploding heads, clouds, and whatever else I find visually interesting. I make my paintings on canvas using POSCA paint markers.

I'm also a psychiatrist, but I don't approach painting as a way to illustrate psychological theories or diagnoses. I don't think every artwork needs a hidden meaning or an elaborate explanation to matter.

I want my paintings to be memorable and enjoyable to live with. If someone likes a work because it makes them feel something, makes a room more interesting, or simply because they like looking at it, that is enough.
